

Diary dates for May

I am receiving a lot of emails about career change. In this current employment and economic climate many people are finding their existing job choice is not offering the security they had hoped. School leavers and graduates are also finding the market tough and are on the hunt for new ideas.

National Career Development Week might help. Running from May 18 to 25, National Career Development Week includes hundreds of events designed for people of all ages and career stages as well as schools and workplaces. To find an event to suit you go to www.nationalcareerdevelopmentweek.com.au/

Also, Career Communiqué Radio will be talking career change on May 18 with yours truly and career coaches Keith Keller and Annemarie Cross. Just tune in by typing in <http://careercommuniqueradio.ning.com/> You can email Ask Kate with any questions or topics you want us to tackle during the session.

Finally, I want to remind everyone that we have an extensive section on Career Development on the CareerOne website.

ask Kate
editor of careerone

Just click on the News & Advice tab at the top of our home page and then the Career Development tab. The sections include Changing Careers and Career Profiles, which houses hundreds of articles based on interviews with people about their particular career choice, Career Coaching, the Personality Profiler and Career Diary.

Career Coaching articles by or interviews with career coaches, the Personality Profiler is a free online test you can take to help you find out what you are suited to and Career Diary lists "webinars", seminars, training open days and other events relevant to CareerOne readers.

To submit a question or comment visit www.careerone.com.au and click on the Ask Kate link.