What: Community forum - to launch the 2010 National Career Development Week campaign, and a pre-launch of activities in your region and across Australia during 17 to 23 May. The program will commence with a light lunch, a small local service provider's expo, entertainment provided by the community and a "Have your say" activity. The Forum will follow, facilitated by Steve Liebmann (broadcaster and journalist), and will include community career stories and a Q&A session.

Why: National Career Development Week (NCDW), now in its fourth year, is a year-long program that encourages all Australians to develop the skills to manage their careers, learning, work and lives in order to take control of their future. Career development has benefits to both the individual and the community at large. This community activity is designed to demonstrate how engagement in career development across the community can contribute to building a stronger future for the community.
